Candy crush saga apk for pc

There's no doubt that games like Candy Crush Saga and Clash of Clans are fun, but in the end it feels like a waste of time. There's nothing wrong with having fun, of course, but why doesn't multitask do something that is both fun and enriching? Here are some apps for phones and tablets that are not only fun, but can also help you achieve real-world goals. Whether you want to learn a tool, get in shape, or find a mate, these apps will help you do these things while having a dose of fun. 1. Zombies, Run! You don't have to look hard to find a workout app in an app store, but one you'll probably won't have zombies in it. This app encourages you to run it by making it seem like zombies are hot on your click. The fiction plays out in a series of missions, from actors and sound effects to creating a world overrun by the undead. You represent the runner who starts out to collect supplies to build your base. Between missions, the app plays music from your phone, making it like the best in the world: A radio game, a collect-a-thon workout game, and a music app all wrapped together. There is no better way to get in shape and give your imagination a workout too. Try it here for Android or here for iOS. 2. Memrise This entertainment educational app contains far more languages than you could learn in a lifetime, including Spanish, French, Mandarin Chinese, and even Klingon and Dothraki. His ambitious promise is to help you learn 44 words per hour, mass-growing your language skills in record time. And since some people learn better visual indications and others learn rote repetition, the application comes equipped with games suitable for all kinds of learning styles. He even acknowledges how you learn best and adjusts his presentation to your style. He's pretty smart. So instead of getting meaningless results in a game like Candy Crush Saga, you end up learning actual valuable information. Try it here on Android and here on iOS. 3. DragonBox Algebra I think you all agree that algebra can be a hard fall to wrap your mind around. This ingenious app starts out looking like a puzzle game which you can manipulate shapes to progress. While playing, the idea remains the same, but shapes are slowly replaced by symbols and numbers. Before you know it, you solve real algebra equations. The game comes with two different flavors, one for kids ages 5 and up, and another for 12 and older crowds. That's right: DragonBox can teach the 5-year-old how to solve algebra equations. It's pretty nice, isn't it? Try it here for Android or here for iOS. 4. Tinder If you've been out of the dating pool for a few years, you won't know exactly what the deal is with Tinder. In short, it's an app that makes it fun to find a date. When you create an account, you upload some pictures of yourself and link them to the You can offer up an almost endless stream of pictures of nearby people you might be interested in dating. You can simply simply their pictures to tell me if they care or not. Then, if they both show interest in each other, they can use the app to send messages. Swiping to find a date isn't all that different from swiping to match candy, is it? But if you just might find a future spouse, Tinder is likely to make better use of your time. Try it here for Android or here for iOS. 5. Piano Tutor If you've always wanted to pull a Beethoven and learn piano but never had time, this app offers a great introduction. Even if you don't have a keyboard to connect, you can teach a surprising number of basics about the games offered in the app. With four game modes that make learning fun, the app will help you learn to read scores, practise your rhythm, test your pitch recognition, and play songs. And if you have a MIDI keyboard, you can connect it to your iPhone or iPad to play on a real keyboard. Grab this app for iOS here. More Entertainment Cheat Sheet Candy Crush Saga: More tips, tips, and cheats to help you crush more candy both in reality and dreamworld. Candy Crush Saga is arguably one of the most addictive games ever made for iPhone and iPad. And if you've gotten sucked into crushing candies just as much as we have, you've undoubtedly found yourself stuck at some point in one of the hundreds of levels you are playing through Candy Crush. With the addition of Dreamworld and new levels, we thought it's time that you get ten more tips, tips, and cheats to deal with your Candy Crush addiction! Aside from the daily spin wheel, there aren't many ways to get free boosters with the Candy Crush app as well. That's why it's a good idea to log in to your Facebook account from your computer and sometimes play. Not only do you get boosters more often, for some reason levels seem to be slightly easier with the Facebook version of Candy Crush. This is especially useful if you have been stuck on a level for quite some time. 2. Buying boosters is much cheaper on Facebook on iPhone and iPad, with a typical booster costing around $2. On Facebook, you buy gold bars and cash them in to supporters. A typical reminder of 3-5 gold rods via Facebook. You can buy 5 gold rods for $1. If you're someone who buys boosters regularly, you can do math. You may save a lot of money by purchasing them through Facebook. Of course you can't transfer to the mobile app, but if you don't mind playing on your computer now and again, this is the cheaper way to play. 3. In some levels you can avoid bombs altogether if you are careful to watch candy machines to release bombs. Usually you can try and avoid bringing bombs to the game board at all. For example, swap candies out of these machines, but don't delete them if you can help. Of course, there are times when a jelly may need to be removed, but if avoid the bomb carrier carrier and you'll find these levels to be much less chaotic. 4. Make the best move possible. Clearing jelly Sometime it is very tempting to swap candies to clear the jelly to be removed. Keep in mind that sometimes combo moves are a better bet and can result in clearing more candy instead of just one or two. This is mainly because the game strategy says to bring candies from below to lead to a move that is better. That being said, if you have a shadow between clearing top jelly and some candies out of the board, it's say you to flip the well and bottom to create a cascade effect. 5. Don't waste needed candy. This is involved in picking always stick to colored candies dead in the trash. Basically, if you blow up a needed candy and a location where is that now, you can't gain anything after the loss. The use of striped candies is a certain way. You can't get when a line of striped sits right next to it. If at all possible, get rid of the line of stripes in those over bows acquiring a score. 6. Be sure to collect daily Candy crush now gives you a daily spin to help you collect boosters. You can accumulate these boosters over time, so be sure to collect them. You can find the daily speed wheel in the main map menu, where you can see your live number. 7. The candies that balance Odus change dreamworld if you've played dreamworld, you're already aware that you have to look at the matched candies that balance Odus on the moon. However, one thing many people don't realize is that these candies change every time they get a Moon Struck bonus. In other words, if Odus clears all certain colored candies for you, the candies that balance him will change. 8. Move suggestions the game gives you usually suck if you take a while to make a move. Candy Crush assumes that you're stuck. At this point it will be a flesh candy that you can make an achievable move. Unless that's the only step on the board, I strongly recommend not to take it. Normally the proposed moves to the game give not only no good, they are downright terrible decisions. Instead, just spend the extra time looking around the board for something better. You can easily test this theory if you wait a second to take any action. You'll see the moves quickly, suggesting it's not good. 9. Combine Coconut Wheels and wrapped candy with coconut wheels just displayed at ingredient levels, and one of the only boosters you can't make using is a combination of candies. However, combining them with packaged candies allows you to break through frosting and many other types of obstacles fairly easily. Depending on the direction the coconut wheel looks, combining it with packaged candies creates a whole range of packages of candies that explode. You can see why this is a great way to easily break through hard without aeration moves. 10. iPhone and iPad lives are out of sync as you can keep a multitude of Facebook tabs open or the system takes time in order to get more lives, you can also switch between the iPhone and iPad. Basically, use all your life on one device and then just pick up another one. Because system time on a device is turned off and not a cloud-based service that says you've only played on another device, you can switch for as long as you want.
